

As we recall the great passion and dedication by which St. Bartholomew had given his life in dedication to the Lord, and as we seek to emulate his examples and be inspired by his deeds, we are called to discern carefully on our own path in life. Are we capable of devoting ourselves to the Lord in the same manner? Are we willing to commit our time, effort, resources, and attention to glorify the Lord daily, in our own words, actions, and deeds?

As we remember the courage and the faith of St. Bartholomew, we are reminded that for all the great deeds he had done, it was all possible because he entrusted himself completely to the Lord and gave himself completely to His cause, and allowed Him to lead him down the path of great virtue. We may be ordinary ourselves, but God called on the ordinary ones to follow Him, and made them worthy, and bestowed on them the strength and courage, the wisdom and intellect, and the power required for them to fulfill their calling.
