

Thoughts on Sunday's Readings

In the Gospel, Jesus comes to Galilee with a call to repent and believe. Today's readings point out how powerful the word of God can be to bring about change in the lives of those who hear it. God's word can even change the heart of a city, as it does the citizens of Nineveh, who turn from their evil ways. Or it can move the hearts of four fishermen who found themselves leaving behind the life they had led for many years to follow a stranger who had simply called out, "Come after me, and I will make you fishers of men." The life-giving, life-transforming power of God's word continues to bring the reign of God into our world in both subtle and surprising ways. What change of direction is God calling you to in your life?

Next week we will take up the Collection for the Church in Latin America. For many in Latin America a rising secular culture, difficult rural terrain, and a shortage of ministers all present obstacles to practicing faith. Your support provides lay leadership training, priestly and religious formation, and other programs to share our Catholic faith with those who long to hear the Good News of Christ. To learn more about how your gifts make a difference, visit www.usccb.org/latin-america.

Reflection

Your mercy is always there, always available, always outlasting the interval between my first breath and my last. I know that your mercy will enfold my children, and my children's children, with a strength and finality I can never possess. And so I offer myself up entirely to your mercy; please let it carry my prayer for peace into every generation.
